Ramon Grayson was killed when his squad's Armored Personnel Carrier (APC) hit a mine at a stream crossing west of Ap Lam-An(2) in Binh Thuan Province.

Mike Chisam, former 1st Platoon Leader, "Bravo"
Company Remembers:

"On May 5, 1970, we were operating just north of Ap Binh Lam. Company Commander Bob Camors left me in charge of the Company as he had to go back and get ready for some type of inspection. My platoon placed an ambush out on foot during the preceding night that made no contact. I sent two Armored Personnel Carriers (APCs) to pick them up and I was standing up in the Command APC watching them return when, at about 200 meters Northwest of our location, they had to cross a stream with very steep banks. They chose an obvious crossing site and I watched as the first APC hesitated and then proceeded down the embankment. I had always taught my men to stop and check obvious crossing sites as they were prime areas for the enemy to plant mines. I grabbed the microphone to call and stop them but, by that time, the second APC began to descend into the creek bed and there was a tremendous explosion as the 1st Squad's APC was blown in the air and completely flipped over...landing upside-down on one of the creek bed embankments.

We rushed in and were there in just a minute or two. "Red" Aaron was trapped inside & Ramon Grayson had been in the TC hatch and the 50 Cal hit him in the head. The track was burning & sounded like a pop corn popper with all the ammunition cooking off. We were dragging Grayson away from the wreckage when the track exploded. The explosion threw me head over heel... but I was OK. We went in to recover Red's body and we were standing over him when a grenade cooked off. It felt like splinters going into my chest but I was very fortunate. The guy next to me (can't remember who) got two "frag" wounds in the head but fortunately they were minor. a third man, Grady Butler, was also wounded. Aaron and Grayson were killed in the initial blast."

A map of the location (AN869297) is shown on the right, with the position of the Platoon Leader noted at AN872295.
