"Friendly Fire" is the term used in conjunction with battle zone fatalities caused by accidents and carelessness on the part of personnel constantly in possession of the instruments of death associated with an Infantry Unit in combat.

Corporal Morris was mortally wounded when, on November 13th, he was being handed a .45 Caliber pistol by a fellow platoon member. The safety was released in the exchange and the trigger accidentally pulled...resulting in a severe wound to Morris's head. He died instantly and did not suffer. A medical evacuation helicopter was there within minutes, but there was nothing that could be done to save him.

According to Association Member Ken Bradley, who witnessed the event, the man who had passed him the weapon was terribly distraught...and never the same after. Charlie Company had been sent to an undisclosed area outside of Camp Radcliff as a result of a flurry of attacks on the huge base and nearby bridges on Highway 19 during late 1968.

*The list of awards shown here reflects the standard medals issued to all men who served in Vietnam. We have added the undocumented Bronze Star and Purple Heart since these are indicated on his gravestone. Cemetery Laws prohibit placement of such an indication without documentation...thus giving us "Just Cause" to list these awards here. The Purple Heart was NOT awarded for "accidental" deaths. We can only assume an Headstone indicated award was given for an earlier combat related wound. Since no "Heroism" was involved in the award of the Bronze Star, we "assume" it would have been for meritorious service and we show a rendering here of the common wording for such awards.
